Love's Victory.

The clouds were massed in crimson glory in the west, and on them were fixed the large, beautiful eyes of Lady Florence Hammersley, who stood looking from one of the many windows of her new home.

It was the eve of her wedding day. Scarce eight hours previously she had sworn to love, honor and obey Hugh Hammersley, the wealthy manufacturer until death did them part.

He it was who now occupied her thoughts, and shut out the splendid landscape, glinted with the glory of the dying day. Natural enough for the husband to fill heart and mind alike of his bride, yet a frown contracts the low, white brow, an ominous glitter shines in the wonderful gray eyes, and a scornful smile plays about the exquisitely curved lips, while the little hand, grasping the curtain, is tightly clenched. A sound breaks her revery. She quietly turns, as the door of the room is softly opened, and the figure of a tall, powerful man darkens the threshold.

"You find all to your liking, Florence?" he asks, and voice and eyes alike are tender as he puts the question.

"A moment ago—yes," she replied. "I was alone."

A shade darkened his face.

"Alone, Florence? Is my presence really so distasteful to you?"

She shrugged her shoulders, and turned her face once more toward the open window.

With one stride he had reached her side, and laid his hand upon her arm.

"Answer me!" he said; and his tone was a command. "To-day you swore to make my happiness. I knew that the daughter of one of England's proudest, if poorest, peers would not have stooped to the plebeian hand of the rich manufacturer's son, had it not been that the fortunes of her house had sadly fallen; I knew she was no hypocrite, to feign a love she did not feel. But I did not know she gave scorn for love, or hatred for courtesy. She was a woman, I a man. She bridged the social gulf between us when she became my wife. Florence, do you already regret the step?"

"Bitterly! madly!" she cried, raising her eyes to his, and letting him see all the scorn and anger in their depths. "You say I was no hypocrite. I was, but I will be so no longer. You need not talk alone of my ambition. What of yours? You had money, not rank, not social position. The latter I give you in exchange for your wealth. The bargain is an even one—let us cry quits but let us have no talk of love or heart, or sentiment; let us bury these in a martial grave, and on it uprear a monument of distant courtesy. Leave me my solitude, unless when the world demands it otherwise. I will not intrude upon yours."

The young man's face was of an almost ghastly pallor as she finished speaking. His hand dropped from her arm.

"Though I may boast no title, my lady," he said very slowly, "I claim nobility's truest rank—the rank of a gentleman, to whom the wishes of the woman he has made his wife are law. You have not spared me in expressing yours. Allow me to offer you my deepst sympathy for the cruel fate which tempted you to make the sacrifice on which the church this morning sets its zeal, and which I, for the first time appreciate. Happily, madam, the home to which I have brought you is not a cottage. When you wish for me, command me. Otherwise I beg you will consider your apartments your castle, at whose gates Hugh Hammersley will never knock, either as suppliant or intruder.

He bowed low as he ceased speaking and slowly recrossed the room. On its threshold he paused. Did he expect her to call him back, or at least to soften her cruel words? If so, he was wrong. His hesitation was scarcely preceptible. The door closed behind him—the young and beautiful woman was again alone.

An expression of surprise, of almost admiration swept over her face, then the old scorn blazoned there.

"At least he understands me now," she murmured, "but for a plebeian, he did it well."

Rank for money. It had been a fair exchange, the world decreed; and many a house, hitherto an unknown land to the young inheritor both of his father's fortune and the great workshops which covered acres of space in the very heart of the great city, now welcomed him to its fetes and its tables. Fair women smiled upon him, and men who once would have turned their backs, listened to his opinion with attention which grew into respect.

If the young bride had expected to be ashamed of her husband, the expectation was destined to disappointment. On every side she heard his praise, and the frown vanished from her brow and the scorn from her lip.

Never did he fail in courtesy toward her; never did she express a wish left unfilled. A cheque-book, with blank cheques signed by his signature to be filled up as she wished, lay on her toilet table. Hitherto her life had been one of almost penury, spite of her exalted rank. A marrige de convenance had been the sole resort left her and she had unhesitatingly availed herself of it.

Her beauty unrivalled even with the old shabby setting, was now enhanced by exquisite toilets and priceless jewels. She had all that her fondest dreams had pictured, yet day by day a restless, unsatisfied longing was gnawing at her heart, and she looked about in vain for the unknown something which should satisfy it.

Once, as she and her husband were driving home together from some brilliant fete, remembering some remarks concerning him which had reached her ear, she glanced toward him.

"A wonderfully handsome man," a woman high in rank had said, and his wife was compelled to confirm the verdict.

"Hugh, are you not well?" she said, and laid her gloved hand on his arm.

He shivered at her touch and drew himself hastily away.

At that moment the carriage stopped and the footman threw open the door. For the fist time he permitted the man to assist his wife to alight, he following her up the stairs and disappearing within his rooms.

She mounted the steps slowly, and when within her own apartments stood still.

"He has learned to hate me," she said to herself, "to hate me! and I—"

The rest of the sentence was left unfinished.

There was a great excitement in the town. The men belonging to Hugh Hammersley's factories had struck for higher wages, and he had refused their demand.

It was a principle of right with him. He was both just and generous in the prices paid them, and he determined not to be coerced into a step his judgement told him was but the first toward proving that his workmen, not himself, might hold the mastery.

The immense buildings were closed; the heavy looms were still; the drinking-places throughout the city were constantly filled with groups of sullen men, who had already lost what the advance would gain them in a year.

Days merged in to weeks, and sullenness found voice, and voice merged into threats, and the threats directed themselves against one man, the master of the works.

"It's all very well for him to ride in his carriage while we starve," they said. "Let him look to himself. Hungry men are desperate."

At last these threats, reached his ear. For the first time since that memorable day, almost a year before, he presented him self at his wife's apartments. As a voice, in answer to his knock, bade him enter, he opened the door.

By a strange coincidence she was standing in the self-same spot, but a deep crimson flush mounted to her forehead, and betrayed her surprise at this most unlooked-for visit. She took a step forward to meet him, but paused. He was the calm self-possessed one of the two.

"I would apologize for my intrusion," he said, "but that when I make known its object you will understand its necessity. I hear this morning that the men are banding themselves into rioters. My house will be the first point of attack. I deem it best that you send your jewels and valuables to the bank, and seek some place of safety with any of your friends whom you may prefer."

"And you?"

"I shall remain here."

"But there is danger."

"True; but no man hitherto, I think, has suspected me of cowardice, and as my post is here, here I will remain. I shall take all measures for my safety, then meet what ever comes. In case of the worst—and doubtless at this juncture my life is threatened—I have left all my affairs in shape, and need hardly assure you, madam, that my wife's future has been my first concern."

"Thanks," she murmured, and bent her head.

He could not see the tear that glistened on the lashes sweeping the lovely cheek.

"I have thought of Lady Ripley," he continued. "She, I am sure, will be delighted to welcome you. Will you choose her house?"

"No."

"Whose, then?"

"I shall remain here."

"It is impossible."

"And why? You stay. A wife's place is beside her husband."

He smiled bitterly.

"This is scarcely the time, madam, to remember your vows. Forget them, I pray you, in this, as in all else. I must insist upon your choosing some other shelter."

She shook her head.

"I cannot," she murmured in a voice so low that he could scarcely catch the words.

"You cannot? Is there some reason, then I do not know?"

"Perhaps, but one I cannot confess. Respect it, however, I beseech you, and let me remain."

"I could scarcely hope, madam, to be esteemed worthy of your confidence, neither can I use force in compelling you to leave this house, but I must exercise a husband's rights in demanding your obedience. The danger is too obvious to permit you to share it."

"Be it so, then. Within an hour my apartments will be vacant."

"Shall I escort you to your friend's house?"

"No, I will go alone." She hesitated a moment. "You will promise me not to run any unnecessary risk?"

"No man should trifle with his life—it is Heaven's gift," he answered, and abruptly left her standing with clasped hands and heaving bosom.

"What care he took to tell me why his life was precious!" she murmured. "Yet, do I not deserve it?" Yes, but not that it should be taken from me. Oh, Heaven spare him! spare him!" And she fell, in bitter weeping, on her knees.

It was midnight when the mob attacked the house. There were loud cries for the master.

"Let him speak to us, and we will listen!" they shouted.

Within the barricaded windows Hugh Hammersley heard and understood. He advanced toward one of the windows, and began unfastening the barriers. The foreman of the works hastily seized his arm.

"You are mad!" he said, "I have despatched a messenger for assistance. Show yourself, and your life will not be worth a moment's ransom. It is a trick to make you show your self."

"The master! the master!" came the cry.

"They are right," said Hugh. "They respect—they used to care for me. I will talk to them. If they kill me, a man cannot die in a better cause than in doing his duty. My duty lies in proving my cause right. Let me go."

But at this instant a dress rustled at the door. Hugh turned. His wife, pale and beautiful, stood upon the threshold of the room. Ere his surprise could find words, she was kneeling at his feet, her arms clasped about him.

"My love! my husband!" she cried. "You shall not go! Despise me, hate me, as you will. I deserve it all. But, oh, do not cast away the life without which mine could not exift!"

He looked at her as in a dream, then motioned for the others to withdraw, before he lifted her from where she knelt.

"How came you here?" he questioned. "Poor child! the terror has turned your brain."

"No, Hugh, no! I could not leave you. I said that I would go, only that I might stay. I stayed because I love you—because I have loved you from the very day I became your wife, though I scorned and refused to acknowledge the passion which has mastered me. I know that I may never hope to win that which I might once have won; but let me know that you live—let me but see you, hear your voice, and even though you hate me, yet I may glean some happiness."

"Hate you!" he whispered. "My love, my wife! You have indeed made my life a precious boon. But listen, they are calling me, I must go."

"Then I will go with yo," she replied.

As the fastenings fell at the touch of his hand, she stepped out on the balcony by his side.

A long, low murmur ran through the crowd below. No weapon, no armor could have protected Hugh Hammersley as did the presence of that young, beautiful woman, who stood with hands clasped about his arm.

Silence fell as he spoke a few earnest words. Ere he had finished the tramp was heard of approaching soldiers, but they were not needed. The strike was ended. Calm had taken the place of passion and reason of anger. But far, far deeper than the external peace between master and men, was that which had stolen into Hugh Hammesley's heart—the heart where lay pillowed the fair, haughty head, which like the restless dove sent from the ark, had found at last shelter and sweet rest.

How Cleveland Receives.

A Satisfactory Visit from John Boyle O'Reilly of the Boston Pilot.

From the New York Herald.

ALBANY, Sept. 2.—It requires considerable patience and general equanimity of temper on the part of Governor Cleveland to attend to his official duties and at the same time courteously receive the hundreds of visitors who daily call upon him. Such qualities he possesses to a marked degree. There is no formality what ever about his receptions. The entrance to the main executive chamber remains open continually. Cards are handed in or out as the visitor pleases. When the visitor enters if the governor happens to be disengaged, he or she walks up to his desk and is received with a cordial shake of the hand. If the governor is conversing with other parties, then the latest arrivals advance in their turn. No exceptions whatever are made. The powerful politician, the millionaire and the poor laborer stand upon the same footing as far as an interview with the coming president is concerned. Your correspondent watched some of their interviews with interest. The governor does not practice the arts of the demagogue, paying more attention to the man with the soiled overalls than to the sumptvously attired politician. He has the same genial, unstudied welcome for all. This city is really fast becoming a Mecca for visitors.

The rush continued to-day, several small excursion parties from the river counties and the interior of the state paying a visit to the capital. Of course the principal feature is a call upon the governor, in order to see him, and, if possible, to enjoy a few moments' conversation. Then the excursionists seek the nearest photographers, and, purchasing a cabinet picture of the governor, return home, feeling highly elated.

Among the late callers upon the governor was John Boyle O'Reilly, editor of the Boston Pilot, accompanied by his friend Mr. Sigourney Butler, of Quincy, Massachusetts. This was the first time Mr. O'Reilly had ever met Governor Cleveland, and he enjoyed an hour's conversation with him. The primary object of O'Reilly's visit was to inquire into the facts relative to the freedom of worship bill. The letter of Assemblyman Peter F. Murray, recently published, explaining the nature of the bill and now it was defeated in the legislature, was commenced upon. Mr. O'Reilly expressed great satisfaction with the governor's statement of the case. Mr. O'Reilly further stated that there had been a great change which was highly favorable to Governor Cleveland within the last two weeks. It was noticeable, too, that public sentiment was rapidly concentrating all over the country upon the New York governor. Mr. O'Reilly, with his friend, left this evening for a few weeks' canoeing on the Susquehanna river.

Ingenious Church Robbers.

A Thief Carried Into the Chancel in a Coffin by His Confederates.

A letter from the City of Mexico says:—This town, the scene of many peculiar crimes, is just now agog over the performances of a thief, which are generally submitted to surpass anything on record. A few days ago several men went to the priest in charge of the Santa Cruz Church in this city and asked permission to hold funeral services over the remains of a deceased friend at 4 o'clock the next morning. There was nothing unusual in the request, for many people in this country bury their dead early in the morning before mass, and the priest gave his permission, agreeing to be present. The men then said they would like to leave the corpse in the church over night, and to this the clergyman also assented. Some time after dark the men appeared at the church bearing a coffin, which they carried up the main isle and deposited in front of the altar. They then withdrew, promising to be there early the next morning.

About midnight the sacristan was awakened by the barking of his dogs, and feeling that something must be wrong, he dressed hastily and stepped from his room into the chancel. A dim light was burning near the altar, by means of which he could see a figure moving slowly on the other side of the chancel. Making up his mind that robbers were in the church, he ran quickly to his room for a pistol, and then made a search of the church. No one was to be seen. On the altar he found everything safe, but when he came to examine the images of the saints he soon saw that the costly jewels with which they had been ornamented were gone. He then redoubled his efforts to find the thief, but after half an hour passed in searching every nook of the great edifice, he was more mystified than ever, for he not only could not find the offender, but he could discover no place where he could have come in or gone out. Just before he determined to give the alarm he thought of the corpse lying down below the chancel rail in the shadow, and the idea came to him that perhaps there might be something wrong about it. Lighting a candle, he stepped softly to the bier and peeped in to the face of the supposed dead man.

As he looked he noticed that the eyelids of the "corpse" twitched nervously under the light, and at the same instant his own eyes fell on some of the jewels which lay beside the man in the coffin.

Overjoyed at finding the thief, the sacristan thrust his revolver into the face of the "corpse" and ordered him to get out. The cold steal on the man's forehead convinced him that the order must be obeyed, and a most extraordinary resurection took place then and there. When the man had gained his feet, the sacristan, still covering him with his pistol, gathered up the jewels, and then marched the culprit to the priest's house, where he was turned over to the police. Several soldiers were then stationed in the church, and when the thief's confederates arrived in the morning they were taken into custody. At first they denied all knowledge of the conspiracy but after a little while one of them confessed and told the whole story. He said they intended to go through the forms of a funeral ceremony, and then carry their friend out to the cemetery, and, after letting him out of the coffin, bury it, and leave the country as speedily as possible. They will be severely punished.

The True Meaning of C. O. D.

A man who had not been long in this country was employed as a domestic in a family, and upon one occasion he was sent to the express office to obtain a package. He was about to leave with it when the clerk called his attention to the three letters C. O. D.

Pat had no idea what the letters meant, but he cleverly guessed at them.

"It's all right," he said; "the owld man's good for the money."

"But do you know what these letters say, Pat?"

"Indade I do. Call On Dad. It's as plain as me nose on your face."

There is almost a pathetic truth in the understanding conveyed in this old story. Many a man is hounded to death by the unseasonable calls made upon him by the members of his family who are educated up to this very end by himself, at first in that fond, slavish spirit of indulgence which the American father displays towards his offspring, as if it was some kind of an unthinking mechanical pet, and afterwards on the unfailing principle that they who sow the wind will reap the whirlwind.

Call on dad.

Business is dull, notes must be met, but appearances must be kept up. Mrs. Shoddy is going to the seashore. 'Our girls' must go, the money is to come out of 'Dad.'

At first he refuses firmly, but as one reason after another is brought to bear on him like a battering-ram of persuasion, he gives away. New bonnets and dresses are bought, a railway journey's expenses defrayed, and that is only the beginning. Incidental expenses are always the straws that break the patient camel's back. They accumulate in heaps, stacks, and at last rise to the dignity of a monument, under which lies a pale, peaceful man, no longer persued by the legend: "Call on Dad."

Your Calling.

"I am sorry I was not trained to some commercial pursuit," said a professional gentleman to a successful business friend in Detroit.

"See here, young man," was the reply, "do you really think you are sorry? Aren't you doing well enough? Come, now, would you voluntarily give up your present calling?"

"Too old to think of a change now."

"Nonsense! Never too old to correct mistakes. But in your case I suspect you want to make a mistake instead of to correct one. I made a mistake in my early life, and I'll tell you how it was: My father was a lawyer. There were three boys of us, and every influence was thrown around us when very young to stir in us the ambition to enter professional careers. We had a fine library, the tone of our home was refined and cultured, and before any of us grew up we were well grounded in polite literature. We had sense enough to see that father would not listen to any objections to a professional life, and so, under a sort of compulsion, we went the old gentleman's way. I was too good to be a preacher, and had too weak a stomach to be a doctor. The law was the last resort, so I took it up. After I was admitted, I whacked away at the dry and unproductive stuff for fifteen yenrs. It was the martyrdom of drudgery. Finally I made a break, went into business and have always been prosperous and happy from that day to this. You see I had found my niche, and I can say with truth that I find more pleasure in making a good sale than in pocketing the profits of it. My business suits me; I take pleasure in it, and I long ago made up my mind that my boys should follow their inclinations in the matter of a life occupation, no matter whither they were led.

"The successful and great editors and writers are those who love with all-conquering enthusiasm the thorny and difficult road of journalism. It is so with our merchants and all manner of men."

Blaine's Boom in Maine.

Following the heavy republican loss in Vermont comes the lame result of last Monday's election in Maine. In spite of the hot contest and the hard work of Blaine in his own state his popular (?) majority sinks down to 16,000. The lowest majority ever given for Governor by the Republicans of Maine in any Presidential year was 15,444 in 1876 and the highest 24,540 in 1856. To make a hopeful and bright showing for Blaine, Robies' majority ought to have been more than the republicans of that state ever gave to any candidate for governor. How Blaine can expect to fare successfully in close states in November, when his own state starts in with such a cool and chilly republican majority is a query which likely gives Blaine and his party leaders the horrors. In the meantime the Democrats are evidently gathering force for a victorious battle.

THE next State elections, occuring in October will be in Georgia on the first Wednesday of that month and those of Ohio, Indiana and West Virginia on the second Tuesday. All other states will have their elections on the 4th of November.

The following article from the Harrisburg Patriot gives assurance to the Democracy that West Virginia is by no means a doubtful state as some republican papers would have it, but will fall into line with a vengeance :

West Virginia All Right.

WHEELING, W. Va., Sept. 6.—The democracy are more thoroughly aroused more closely organized than in any previous canvass. The groundless boast of the radical organs that West Virginia will go republican has had the effect of consolidating the forces of the democratic party throughout the state. Their just indignation is aroused. The hills are full of democrats, and none will stay at home on election day. Not only have the larger towns formed political clubs, but the infection has struck the rural districts, and every hamlet boasts its Cleveland, Hendricks and Wilson club. Wilson, democratic candidate for governor, will carry the state by 15,000 over Maxwell, the fusion candidate. Sanguine democrats put the figure at 20,000. Brannon will beat Goff in the first district for congress, and next year will see West Virginia numbered among the states sending a solid democratic delegation to represent her at Washington.

According to a special dispatch to the Philadelphia Times, Tammany declares for Cleveland. This does away with another fond hope of the Republicans. If Tammany would have shown fight, they would have had a fair chance to carry New York in November. But alas, like everything else goes contrary for them, so will Tammany and New York with a democratic majority ranging from 30,000 to 50,000. The dispatch says :

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.

The nearly unanimous declaration of the Tammany district leaders in favor of Cleveland last evening, although generally expected, has done much to inspire Democratic hopes and action. It is now certain that the full Tammany meeting on Friday evening will formally declare for Cleveland and Hendricks and call a mass meeting to ratify the national ticket at an early day.

The inquiry among the Republicans is: "Does Kelly mean good faith toward Cleveland ?" They feel that if Tammany earnestly falls into line for Cleveland, New York will be lost to Blaine beyond a question. I can answer the question just as well as the best informed man in the city can answer it. Tammany will support Cleveland cordially or not cordially, contingent upon harmony with Kelly on the local ticket. It is Kelly's purpose now to put a straight Tammany ticket in the field, without arrangement with the other Democratic organizations, but it is probable that he will take men whom the other organizations will not want to reject. If there shall be harmony with Tammany on the local ticket, Cleveland will have 50,000 in New York city; if there shall be a jar on the local ticket, Cleveland may not exceed 30,000 in the city. Everything now points to Democratic harmony, and Democratic harmony means Cleveland's success in the Empire State.

Sudden Death of Chas. J. Folger.

Secretary Folger died at his home in Geneva, N. Y., September 4th This ends the life of a distinguished and respected executive officer of the United States. His services as a legislator and Judge of his own State, and as one of Arthur's cabinet officers won for him the esteem and high regard of his fellow citizens. His memorable defeat for Governor of New York, two years ago, and the unfortunate circumstances of that election deeply pained him and even contributed to break down his health. The President and many prominent officials will attend the funeral.

Of course there are many speculations as to who will succeed the deceased in the office of Secretary of the Treasury for the remainder of the term. The general opinion is that the President will fill the vacancy by promotion.

The following from the Phila. Times gives his career in a condensed form :

[Charles J. Folger was a native of Massachusetts and was born April 16, 1818, having passed his sixty-sixth year at the time of his death. He removed to Geneva, N. Y., at the age of twelve years and was graduated from the Geneya College with the honors of his class in 1836, being then eighteen years of age. He at once began the study of law in the office of Mark H. Sibley, at Canandalgua. Young Folger was admitted to the bar in 1839 and soon achieved prominence in his profession. He was appointed Judge of the Ontario Court of Common Pleas in 1844, remaining on the bench one year. He was also master and examiner in Chancery until the Chancery Court was abolished by the Constitution of 1847. In 1851 he was elected County Judge of Ontario county, holding that office four years. Having political as well as judicial aspirations he was elected to the State Senate in 1861 and continued in that body for eight years. He served as chairman of the judiciary committee and was President pro tem. of the Senate during the last four years of his service in that body, being the recognized leader of his party. He acted with the Republican party from its first organization and in May, 1870, received the party nomination for one of the Assistant Judgeship of the Court of Appeals. A new Court of Appeals had been created, consisting of a chief Justice and six Associates, and by the terms of the Constitution each voter was restricted to voting for the Chief Justice and four Associates, Judge Folger and Andrews being choosen by the Republicans. The term was fourteen years, but after having served ten years he was elected Chief Justice in 1880 for a term of fourteen years. He would have retired, however, on full pay after eight years, as he would then have reached seventy years of age, the constitutional limit of service on the bench in New York State. On the accession of President Arthur he was made Secretary of the Treasury, an office which he filled till the time of his death with honest and painstaking fidelity. He was nominated for Governor of the State of New York in 1882, but owing to the factional fights in the Republican party at that time he was overwhelmingly defeated, his opponent, Grover Cleveland, received a majority of 192 000 votes. No charges were made, however, against Judge Folger's character or fitness during the heated campaign which followed his nomination and his defeat was entirely owing to the sins of others and not his own. His character was above reproach and the country loses in him one of its ablest and purest public officials.]

HENRY B. ANTHONY, senior senator of the United States and of Rhode Island, died at his residence on Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 2nd, in his 69th year.

[Henry B. Anthony had served in the United States Senate for more than twenty-five years, having entered that body on the 4th of March, 1859. He looked forward with hope to the end of his fifth term, his heart's desire being to equal the thirty years of service of Thomas H. Benton.

He was born in Coventry, in the State where he has always lived and which he has so long represented in the Senate, on the 1st of April, 1815. He graduated at Brown University when very young and entered upon a newspaper career. In 1838 he took editorial charge of the Providence Journal, which he brought to a position of influence in his State. In 1849 he was elected Governor, serving two terms, when he returned to his newspaper, to which he devoted his attention until 1858, when he was elected to the Senate.

BY THE death of Senator Anthony, Mr. Edmunds becomes the oldest member of the Senate in continuous service, having served uninterruptedly from April 5, 1866, or something over eighteen years. The senior Senator in total length of service is, however, John Sherman, who succeeded Salmon P. Chase, March 29, 1861, and has been a Senator ever since with the exception of the four years of Hayes' administration, during which he was Secretary of the Treasury. This makes his total senatorial service about nineteen years and a half. Senator Morrill, of Vermont, has served seventeen years and a half. The total length of Mr. Anthony's senatorial service, from March 4,1859, until his death, is twenty-five years and a half.

THE COMPLETE RETURNS of the election in Vermont make very little change from the estimate based upon the earliest figures received, the falling off having been nearly uniform throughout the State. The Republican vote is reduced from 47,848 in 1880 to 41,917, a loss of twelve per cent. The Democratic vote is 19,838, against 21,245, in 1880, a loss of about six and one-half per cent. In so strong a Republican State as Vermont the loss was not sufficient to change the result, but a proportionate loss in other States would have very serious results. Thus twelve per cent. off Garfield's vote in New York and six and a half per cent. off Hancock's would change the Republican plurality of 21,033 to a Democratic plurality of 10,889. A similar change would convert Connecticut from 2,656 Republican to 1,205 Democratic majority, and so on. Under the circumstances it is hard for the Blaine organs to extract much encouragement from such a "victory."—Times.

Carl Schurz on the Stump.

He Addresses a Large Audience in German at Milwaukee.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 7.—In response to an invitation sent by the independent republicans of this city, Carl Schurz addressed an immense mass meeting at Schlitz park last evening. Mr. Schurz lived for many years in this state and has to-day more influence among the Germans in this state than any other living man. A considerable percentage of the German republicans of this city have manifested a disposition to bolt the republican nominations, and they asked Mr. Schurz to come and give his views. The democratic party managers had nothing to do with the matter.

Mr. Schurz arrived in the afternoon, accompanied by a large number of prominent Germans, who, acting as a reception committee, went down to Chicago to meet him and escort him here. During the day Mr. Schurz's hotel was crowded with visitors, who gave him a hearty welcome. The demonstration at the park was one of the most immense affairs of the kind ever known in this part of the country. Ten thousand people crowded into the pavillion, packing it to suffocation. Five thousand more surrounded the building. Thousands upon thousands left the park unable to see or hear the speaker. Herman Siegel, editor of the Freie Presse, presided, and the platform was crowded with hundreds of the most prominent people of the state, regardless of party. The enormous audience broke out into tremendous applause as Mr. Schurz was presented, and the cheers were taken up outside the building and carried out into the streets beyond the limits of the park. Mr. Schurz's speech was in German, and was practically the same as that delivered at Brooklyn. By an arrangement entered into before the meeting opened, Joseph Brucker, German secretary of the republican state central committee, interrupted Mr. Schurz from time to time with questions, but the speaker answered the questions in such a way as to completely upset the questioner. Mr. Schurz will speak at several points in the state, and will return to speak in English here next Tuesday night.

Judge Harding's Reasons.

One of Pennsylvania's Leading Republicans Who Will Not Support Blaine.

Ex-Judge Garrick M. Harding was nominated for the Assembly in Wilkesbarre lately by the Democrats. He had been indentified with the Republican party all his life, and the event caused a great deal of talk. He declined the nomination in a characteristic letter. Among other things the Judge says :

"During the last eight years, because doubtless of my pronounced views upon the action, the policy, as well as the unmistakable tendencies of the party of my early adoption, my position has not met the approval of my former political associates. They have been pleased to style me as more a Democrat than a Republican. The crime of 1876, the most stupendous political crime enacted since the formation of the Government, then met and ever has had my unqualified denunciation. History will never forget, time will never blot out or even palliate that great theft and outrage."

He is opposed to probibtion, and gives his reasons. Refering to the Republican Presidential candidate, he says :

"Finally, I have been unable to recognize that embodiment of perfection in James G. Blaine which his champions claim for him. The same reasons which have induced tens of thousands of better Republicans than I ever was thought to be, to withold their support from him, have their effect also upon me. To be an Independent, however, is no part of my nature. Positive and direct action is what the occasion demands."

A Large Shipowner Speaks Out.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—The democratic national committee received the following dispatch from Don M. Dickinson, the member of the national committee from Michigan :

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 5.—Captain John Pigeon, one of the largest shipowners on the great lakes and one of the formost citizens and capitalists of the state, and before the nomination of Blaine always a staunch republican and a large contributor to their campaign funds, refused their application for subscription yesterday, and sent me a letter this morning covering a liberal contribution and declaring for the democratic ticket. DON M. DICKINSON.

A Noted Divine's Letter.

In a letter to the Independent Committee in New York the Rev. Edward Eggleston, a Republican, a noted divine and writer, says: "No reasonable man not blinded by partisan zeal, can doubt, it seems to me, that Gov. Cleveland is the man most likely to administer the Government in such a way as to leave it better and not worse than it is now. To put the administration of reform civil service into the hands of the Republican nominee is to set an experienced fox to watch a poultry-yard."

Woman's Province.

THE DUTIES OF THE GENTLER SEX—HOW BEST FULFILLED.

What a great task is assigned to woman. Its dignity can not be elevated. It is not her province to make laws, to lead armies, nor to be at the head of great enterprises, but to her is given the power to form those by whom the laws are made, to teach the leaders of mighty armies and the governors of vast empires. She is required to guard against having the slightest taint of bodily infirmity touch the frail creature whose moral, intellectual and physical being is derived from her. She must instil correct principles, inculcate right doctrines, and breathe into the soul of her offspring those pure sentiments which in time to come will be a part of themselves, and bless generations yet unborn. Yes, to woman is given the blessed privilege of aiding the sufferer in all the various stages of his existence. She smiles serenely at the christening, and weeps at the burial, while she soothes the bereaved heart. This is her province and duty. Yet how can she fulfill her mission unless possessed of a strong and healthy body? The preparation of Dr. S. B. Hartman, and known as PERUNA, is just the thing for persons suffering from a majority of the complaints incident to this climate. It is invaluable to women, and Mrs. J. W. Reynolds, of New Lisbon, Columbiana county, Ohio, is a noted example of what the medicine can do. She says she has suffered for years with congestion of the lungs, catarrh in the head, and was troubled with a bad cough. She had tried a number of physicians, but they all failed to cure her. She was induced to try PERUNA, and immediately a marked change took place. After using one bottle her cough ceased and in a short time her other ailments were cured. She is now completely restored to health, and gives all the credit to PERUNA. Mr. J. W. Reynolds, her husband, was a confirmed invalid. He could not sleep well, neither could he work. He used PERUNA, and as a result, was completely restored to his former vigor and strength. He says he now feels like a new man.

Mr. Bernhardt Seubs, St. Clair, St. Clair county, Mich., says: "I have thoroughly tried your PERUNA in the various diseases to which parents and a large family of children are ever liable, and I find it in every case to be just the thing needed. No family can honestly be without it."

Nancy Feterman, Cookport, Indiana County, Pa., says: "Gentlemen: Your valuable PERUNA is the best medicine I ever used."

IN TIME OF PEACE PREPARE FOR PEACE.—Changes of climate, diet and water, ofttimes atmospheric changes alone, will subject some member of the family to cholera morbus, dysentery, &c., when the wail of misery in the "wee sma' hours of the night" announce the fact, and you are sent from your comfortable bed across lots of down back alleys for a doctor, 'twould be a good time to reflect that had you only secured a bottle of Curtis' Carmelite Cordial in time, you could with a few drops have headed off the attack, saved a doctor's bill, and secured a peaceful night's rest. Dissatisfied purchasers can have their money refunded.

—Mr. F. O. Hosterman, our gentlemanly Sewing Mashine agent, inserts his new advertisement in this week's JOURNAL. Read it and give him a call. Office on Main street, opposite Campbell's store.

—W. H. Bartholomew, the merchant of Spring Mills sells a good Man's Stoga Boot for $2.00. In fact you will find his prices as low if not lower than any where in the valley. A large stock to select from.

—Sammy Faust, of Spring Bank, gave us a business call on Monday. He had bills struck for his sale of vehicles at Millheim next Saturday. Always glad to see his beaming countenance in our office. Call again.

—The St. Paul and Wolf's Sunday Schools will hold a Union Picnic in Stover's grove, two and a half miles east of Aaronsburg, next Saturday, September 13th. Everybody is cordially invited to attend. W. E. KEEN.

—Mr. Morrison, of Port Matilda, the former teacher of the grammar school in this place, is at present representing a western school furniture firm and the firm of Ivison, Blakeman Taylor & Co., of New York. He visits Millheim frequently.

—A splendid Hardman Piano, one of the best instruments in the market, adorns the parlor of our townsman, J. W. Snook. He purchased it from Bunnell & Aikens, of Bellefonte, who are the sole agents for that celebrated piano in the county.

—Mr. John Kerstetter, Jr., still makes a business of doing special jobs at carpentry. John is really an expert at the business and has large experince, both in making out plans, specifications and drawings, as well as a practical workman. People who entrust their work into his hands can safely rely on having it done in best style at the lowest prices. tf —Democrats in the county should waken up and show their determination to do their duty by thorough organization in all localities. Nothing should hinder any democratic voter to help to advance the success of the whole ticket.

—We ommitted to mention in last week's JOURNAL, that one of Rev. Tomlinson's hearers of his farewell sermon in the Aaronsburg Luth. church on Sunday a week ago was H. Y. Stitzer, Esq., and wife of Bellefonte, who were down on a visit to friends.

—H. H. Tomlinson in a letter to W. A. Tobias states that he has entered upon his duties as book keeper and general manager of one of the largest business houses in Ellsworth, Kansas, and by the tenor of his writing he is well pleased with his position and the place.

—An exchange says that the crazy quilt originated with a country editor's wife, who got the idea from the patches on her husband's clothes. Yes, and like as not, the cake called 'poverty cake' was invented by the same woman, when she looked at his pocket book.

LADIES' MEDICAL ADVISER.—A complete Medical Work for Women, handsomely bound in cloth and illustrated; postpaid for 10 two-cent stamps. Address NUNDA PUBLISHING Co., Nunda, N. Y. 28-3m.

—Rev. Benj. Hengst, accompanied by Mrs. Hengst purposes leaving this morning for East Prospect, York Co., Pa., to attend a church dedication. They will extend their visit to Baltimore to their sons, one of whom, the doctor is expected home from a tour through Europe. They contemplate being away over two Sundays and in their absence Rev. Geo. Hunter, of Lewisburg, will fill the appointments on Sunday the 14th as follows: In the morning at Woodward, afternoon at Aaronsburg and evening at Millheim.

—The large holes in several of the plank of our boardwalks should be repaired with out delay. They are regular traps and will cause some accidents yet. The street and alley committee should see to those matters.

—Chairman Rynder, Milesburg, has issued a notice changing the date for holding the state convention of the National Greenback labor party at Bellefonte from September 18th to September 30th. They are trying to get Ben Butler there as the chief attraction.

—Mr. William Shafer, of Aaronsburg, will make sale of most of his personal property on Saturday afternoon, October 4th. He and wife expect to move to Spring Mills where they will reside with their son, Mr. Henry Shafer, the landlord of the Spring Mills hotel.

—Mr. W. A. Tobias takes the cake for growing curiosities. The other day he brought two samples of snake cucumbers to our sanctum, of which the largest measures 38 inches in length. They are turned in spiral curves, snake fashion, and at the first glance bear a close resemblance to a green snake.

—Large posters have been printed at this office, advertising the public sale of the late Adam Fisher estate, in Gregg township by the executors, J. B. Fisher and Polly Fisher, on Friday, the 26th inst. Forty-five acres of land, flouring mill, saw mill, dwelling house and two tenant houses are the properties for sale.

—Dr. Geo. S. Kemble, a distinguished physician of Mifflinburg, died at his residence at that place, on Tuesday, September 2nd. Many of our readers, were no doubt personally acquainted with the deceased, as he was in town several years ago as one of the attending physicians of John D. Foote, dec'd. His remains were interred at Harrisburg, last Friday.

—See the advertisment of D. S. Kauffman & Co. in this paper. They have been to the cities purchasing fall and winter goods and are now ready to sell a fine article at a most reasonable price. In fact they run the bargain in this neighborhood and we advise our readers to go and call at their place and bring their neighbors along. We are certain it will pay them.

—ANY HOUSEKEEPER who sends at once the names of five married ladies, at same address, and 12 two-cent stamps for postage, will receive free for one entire year, a handsome, entertaining and instructive Domestic Journal, devoted to Fashions, Fancy Work, Decorating, Shopping, Cooking, and Household matters. Best Paper published for Ladies. Every Housekeeper wants it. Regular price, $1.00. Must send now! Address DOMESTIC JOURNAL, 28-3m Nunda, N. Y.

—A picnic and ice cream festival will be held in Gregg Burrell's woods, near the Green Grove church, by the Green Grove Sunday School, next Saturday, the 13th inst. All kinds of eatables can be had on the grounds during the day and evening. First-class speakers have been procured. A brass band will be present to furnish the music. The proceeds of the festival will flow into the treasury of aforesaid Sunday school. The public are most cordially invited to attend.

—On the 5th of last month the new State law went into effect, making it a misdemeanor for any minor under 18 years of age to play billiards or pool in public houses of any kind. The law does not refer merely to places where intoxicants are sold, but to all parlors and rooms kept for the purpose of profit. The proprietor who allows youths under 18 to play, will be liable to a fine of $20 for each offense. The fine is to be sued for in the name of the parents or guardian of the minor, and when recovered goes to the overseer of the poor, for the poor in the city, town or township where the violation of the act occured.—Ex.

—FOR habitial constipation, billiousness, sick heacache, torpidity of the liver, congestion of the kidneys, malaria and all complication arising from a degenerated condition of the bowels, liver or kidneys, McDonald's Improved Liver Pills can be depended upon for certain and permanent relief; as a dinner pill, gentle cathartic and safe aperient, they are without an equal. Many eminent physicians use them in their daily practice. Money refunded to dissatisfied purchasers.

—The Union picnic in Alexander's grove last Saturday could not well have been a better success, as far as the attendance was concerned. The forenoon at the grove was devoted to exercises at the speaker's stand, opening with prayer by Rev. B. Hengst, followed by two addresses by Revs. Herald and Hengst, when Supt. Duck dismissed the assemblage to partake of the delicious dinner concealed in the baskets. Pleasing airs were wafted by the band through the woods, which mingled with the hum of voices of about 600 people. As the day was exceedingly warm, the afternoon was mainly spent in quiet conversation by the older folks and the little folks amused themselves on the swings. There was no lack of hucksters, who were anxious to supply the public with the delicacies of the market. A general complaint expressed was about the utter abscence of games, which made it somewhat montonous for the young people. This feature of picnics, we think, ought never be neglected.

—The Harrisburg Daily Patriot came to us in an enlarged and greatly improved shape last week. It appeared as an eight-page paper, thereby doubling its reading matter. The Patriot ranks among the best dailies in the state, being prompt and strictly reliable in all its news—in fact a paper that can hardly be dispensed with. No doubt future success will crown that enterprising sheet.

—The members of the U. B. church, of this place, will hold a bush meeting in Alexander's grove, commencing next Saturday evening and continuing over Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. Quarterly conference on Sunday, with communion, services in the forenoon. Children's meeting in the afternoon. Preaching every evening of said days. Rev. J. Shoop, P. E., of Carsonville, Dauphin Co., Pa. will conduct the services throughout the meeting. In case of inclement weather the services will be held in the M. E. church. A cordial invitation to attend is extended to everybody.

—Hon. A. G. Curtin, Chas. Smith, Esq., Register J. A. McClain and J. W. Furey, Ass. editor of the Watchman, all of Bellefonte paid this town and Aaronsburg a visit on Friday evening. They were out for a pleasure trip and were well pleased with their ride. The band serenaded Ex. Gov. Curtin, in front of Musser's hotel, and he replied by such remarks as only our Andy can make. As an orator the Governor has not his equal and our people will never tire to listen to him. The party left town on Saturday forenoon to visit Sugarvalley, before returning home.

—At the last meeting of the Centre Co. Medical Society a committee was appointed to pay a fitting tribute of respect to the memory of Dr. G. W. Kline, dec'd. late of Potter's Mills, which submitted the following report:

Resolved, That by the death of Dr. G. W. Kline, this society lost a valued member, and the profession a young physician who gave promise of a career of rare usefulness.

Resolved, That we deeply lament the early death of one whose virtues endeared him to a large circle of friends.

Resolved, That the members of this society tender to the family of the deceased their heartfelt sympathy.

Resolved, That a member of this society be appointed by the President at the next regular meeting, to prepare a brief biographical sketch of the late Dr. Kline for publication in the transactions of the State Medical Society.

Resolved, That these resolutions be entered upon the minutes of this society, and a copy of them be sent to the family of the deceased, and also to the county papers for publication.

Spring Mills Items.

Mr. W. F. Rearick is now painting his new house. William is still improving his property. A move in the right direction—hope many more will follow.

One of our worthy young men, Mr. A. J. Rishel has taken Horace Greely's advice and gone West.

In my travels around town looking for "Items" I saw posted in one of our enterprising stores the following notice: "No setting on new stalk." Oh! where is your Webster.

Wm. Heckman, near Penn Hall sold his farm to a Mr. Teats from Bloomsburg, Pa. for $112 per acre. A very good sale. Hope Mr. H. will locate near our city.

Mr. Henry Royer last fall put 300 lbs. of Buffalo Phosphate on 1½ acres of ground and this year he harvested 91 bushels of Fultz wheat off the same. So it pays to use Phosphate. Mr. R. is one of our go-ahead farmers.

Ex-Gov. A. G. Curtin and others from Bellefonte stopped at the Bibby House the other day for dinner. Straws tell which way the wind blows.

J. Wells Evans, lost a very valuable mare a few days ago. It is not more than 15 months since he lost the mate, for which two animals he refused $400.

While G. A. Runk was riding out after his cow, the horse stumbled and fell on Mr. Runk's leg, bruising it very much.

Mrs. David Burrell who has been laid up with sickness is now getting better. Trust she will soon be out.

Samuel Shafer has weatherboarded his house and intends giving it a coat of paint.

J. L. Roush returned to Lancaster college last week.

Jared Hazel is also weatherboarding his house.

Daniel Roush built a pale fence along the alley. No doubt, he is tired feeding town chickens.

It is rumored that Dr. Lee has bought Mrs. Shafer's property in town, formerly owned by Samuel Zeigler.

Shin Bone was other wise engaged last week.

Miss Sadie Nestleroad and Miss Weight of near Salona were the guests of Jacob Nestleroad's at this place, last week.

Samuel Limbert and lady, of Lock Haven, paid his father, John Limbert, in town, a visit on Saturday.

R. Grimm swapped horses twice in the last ten days.

Hon. A. G. Curtin spent a couple of hours in our town last Saturday and was accompanied by Charles Smith, Esq., candidate for county treasurer, and Mr. J. A. McClain and Mr. J. W. Furey.

Harry, Charley thinks it is about time for you to bring home his buggy spread and pole.

(I would give him a cat the next time, Charley—that would come home of its own accord.)

Fanny Shafer has returned from her visit to Reading.

Harvey Miller has commenced to cut off corn.

Reuben Grimm was the first farmer in this neighborhood to be done seeding. Reuben is always ahead and lots of time to spare. All that is wanting to make Reuben Grimm and his son tip-top fellows is to cast their votes for Cleveland and Hendricks instead for the other fellows.

Coburn Briefs.

Rumor says regular trains will run to Oak Hall by October 1st., on this road.

Our neighbor, Jacob Moyer and Mr. Musser, of Millheim, are now getting in a supply of plaster.

John Seriff has moved into his new house and is happy.

Andrew Stover's new house is now ready and he will soon occupy it.

The talk of a permanent camp ground near Coburn is one of the things we hope will become a reality. We certainly have all the advantages for such an enterprise—spring water, railroad facilities, fine grove, easy of access and near to the village.

Andy Vonada and Henry Kling have plastered their houses and prepared them for occupancy, since you last heard from us.

Our friend Parker, the restaurant man, has moved his family from Rebersburg to this place.

D. T. Raymond and family, from near Centre Hall, have joined us as citizens.

Our merchants are still busy supplying their trade, which, judging from the general appearance of things, is steadily increasing.

We can boast of three fortune tellers among our population.

Mr. Catherman, operator at Mifflinburg, spent Sunday with his brother-in-law, W. H. Kreamer, at this place.

Some of our boys enjoy midnight baths in the dam.

What has become of our brass band?

Another carload of peaches expected here next week. Z.

MULTUM IN PARVO.—McDonald's Great Blood Purifier or Sarsaparillian Alterative is the most highly concentrated, most harmonizing and skillfully combined of all the blood medicine offered the public. Many certificates from well-known and worthy persons could be furnished to substantiate the virtues claimed for this great medicine, but the manufacturer prefers simply to say any purchaser feeling the benefit derived from the use of a bottle not equivalent to the seventy-five cents invested in the purchase can have their money returned.

HOW SOLDIERS ARE MADE.

What a Recruit is Obliged to Undergo.

Only About Eight Applicants in Every Hundred Who Pass.

An erect and good-looking young fellow of stalwart proportions and muscular appearance presented himself at the recruiting office, No. 1919 Market Street, for enlistment in the United States army. Captain H. H. Humphreys, the officer in charge, was favorably impressed with the general appearance of the young man, who was of Scotch birth and about twenty-eight years old. The applicant passed the physical examination creditably. No defect in his anatomical structure was discovered to operate against his desire to become a soldier. In giving the final instructions Captain Humphreys noticed that the young man did not seem to comprehend their import. "I didus ken," was his explanation. He was rejected on account of his imperfect knowledge of the English language.

The general supposition would be that rejections on the ground of imperfect knowledge of the English language were very rare, but the books of the recruiting officer show to the contrary. An average of one in fifteen persons fails to pass on this account The records show that rejections on account of defective teeth, and myopia exceed all others. It is required that the applicant shall have no less than eight good molar teeth, in addition to a fair number of incisors, which are considered necessary to a proper mastication of army fare.

The process of enlistment is of interest. When the applicant presents himself, the recruiting officer asks him a number of questions concerning his health, habits, and occupation. If the answers are satisfactory the examination begins. Commencing with the head, which is closely examined for depressions, the examiner inspects the eyes, nose, mouth, and ears. The would-be soldier then disrobes, and his body is thoroughly searched for physical defects. Every test is applied to learn the condition of the heart and lungs. The arms, hands, fingers, legs, feet, and toes are all minutely scanned. Stiffness in the joints of any of these members is fatal to the chances of an applicant for enlistment. After undergoing the examination, the aspirant to military fame is directed to jump as high as he can and alight fairly upon his feet. If he winces, the indications are that he is troubled with corns on the soles of his feet, which is a cause for rejection, as an affliction of that sort would be an obstacle in marching. If the applicant successfully passes the physical requirements, he mounts the scales. His weight, in order to be eligible, must not be under 120 and not over 180 pounds. He must not be less than five feet four inches high. He is then taken into an adjoining room, where he indulges in a bath.

After taking the oath and signing the papers, he is supplied with an outfit. This consists of a flannel shirt, canton-flannel drawers, a dark-blue blouse, grayish-blue pantaloons, a pair of suspenders, woolen socks, shoes, and a blue cap. Under the escort of two soldiers the new recruit is taken to David's Island, N. Y., where he enters upon his five years' service to the Government. Of the persons presenting themselves for enlistment only about eight out of a hundred succeed in passing the physical examination. About a year ago an applicant was discovered to have winged shoulder-blades. The bones projected in shape of wings nearly two inches. He was considered entirely too angelic for the military service.

Moral Courage in Every-day Life.

Have the courage to discharge a debt while you have the money in your pocket.

Have the courage to do without that which you do not need, however much your eyes may covet it.

Have the courage to speak your mind when it is necessary you should do so, and to hold your tongue when it is prudent you should do so.

Have the courage to speak to a friend in a 'seedy' coat, even though you are in company with a rich one, and richly attired.

Have the courage to own you are poor, and thus disarm poverty of its sharpest sting.

Have the courage to tell a man why you will not lend him your money.

Have the courage to "cut" the most agreeable acquaintance you have, when you are convinced that he lacks principle. "A friend should bear with a friend's infirmities," but not with his vices.

Have the courage to wear old clothes until you can pay for the new ones.

Have the courage to prefer comfort and propriety to fashion in all things.

Have the courage to acknowledge your ignorance, rather than seek credit for knowledge under false pretenses.

Have the courage to provide an entertainment for your friends within your means, not beyond.

Have the courage to take a good paper, and pay for it anually in advance.

A Righteous Judge.

For services extending through two months in settling an estate worth $32,000, three Milwaukee lawyers recently presented bills aggregating $25,000. When the bills were submitted to Judge Drummond for approval, he said:

Gentlemen, you consider yourselves good lawyers. How much more are your services worth to your clients than mine to the people? You have charged $25,000 for sixty days' service. Could you not be content, each of you, to take my pro rata for the same time? These charges are infamous. They are such as men who are scoundrels and thieves at heart would make. This charge of $12,000 is cut down to $1,000, those of $5,000 each to $500. Repeat such a piece of rapine in this court and I will disbar every one of you.

DOWNS' ELIXIR.

N. H. DOWNS'

Vegetable Balsamic

ELIXIR

For the cure of

Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Catarrh, Croup, Asthma, Pleurisy, Hoarseness, Influenza, Spitting Blood, Bronchitis, and all diseases of the Throat, Chest, and Lungs. In all cases where this Elixir is used its efficacy is at once manifested, convincing the most incredulous that is not incurable, if properly attended to.—At its commencement it is but a slight irritation of the membrane which covers the Lungs; then an inflamation, when the cough is rather dry, local fever, and the pulse more frequent, the cheeks flushed and chills more common. This Elixir in curing the above complaints, operates so as to remove all morbid irritations and inflamation from the lungs to the surface, and finally expel them from the system. It facilitates expectoration.

It heals the ulcerated surfaces and relieves the cough and makes the breathing easy. It supports the strength and at the same time reduces the fever. It is free from strong opiate and astringent articles, which are of so drying a nature as to be in great danger of destroying the patient; whereas this medicine never dries or stops the cough, but, by removing the CAUSE, consequently, when the cough is cured the patient is well. Send address for pamphlet giving full directions, free.

Price 35 cts., 50 cts., and $1.00 per bottle.
